Fronts with a tantalising texture – homeliness you can lay your hands on

Herrieden, 09-11-2026

In modern living concepts, the sensory perception of surfaces is becoming increasingly prominent. Especially in the kitchen, which has long been more than just a functional workspace, the finish of fronts and surfaces has joined colours and materials as a characteristic feature. Through the new Sora and Prato ranges, quality brand Schüller presents two fronts that make this approach to customised kitchen planning more tangible. Their pronounced texture adds character to the kitchen and conveys cosiness, individuality and atmosphere.

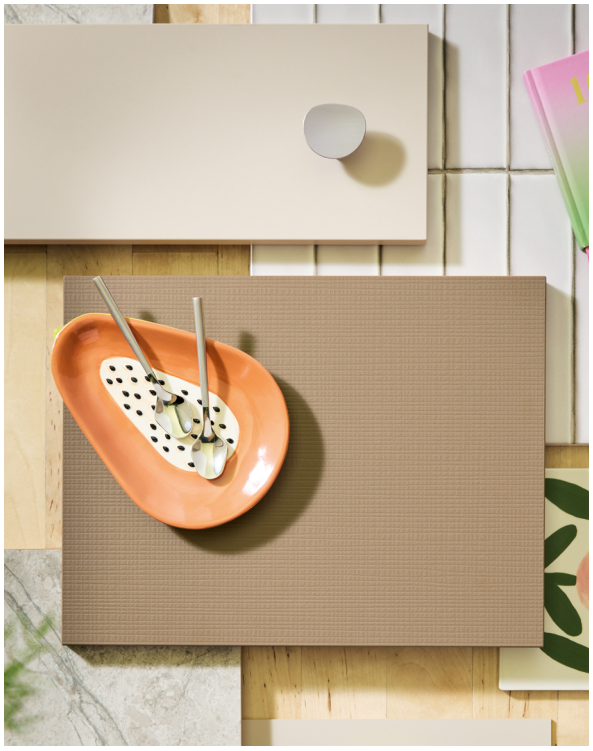

As a functional living space, the kitchen requires a holistic design. Materials are not only seen but also touched as they become part of everyday life. Combined with colours and materials, a design's texture adds depth and creates a harmonious overall look that is tangible at all times. The balanced combination of texture and appearance ensures a perfect design.

Sora: tantalising texture

From the very first touch, the special surface texture on the new Sora front stands out for its pleasant and compelling feel under the fingertips. The integrated 3D pattern looks and feels fantastic. The closer you look at the front, the more its vibrancy comes to life, revealing a surface that almost appears to be woven. This front can be planned in the colours almond beige, caramel and seashell white. These elegant, low-key shades give the textured front room to work its magic and can be combined in countless ways with many other colours and materials.

Left: The 3D texture of the new Sora front immediately catches the eye. Right: Here in caramel, the Sora's elegant colour selection allows for captivating combinations. Photos: Schüller

Prato: a striking wood look you can't keep your hands off

Just like the Sora plastic front, the new Prato wood decor front brings an extraordinary texture into the kitchen. Its special relief pore gives the surface an elegant, high-quality texture that feels silky smooth to the touch. The subtle grain of the Shaker-style front intensifies this impression and highlights the fine pore structure. Both the light sand oak decor and the darker walnut decor enable modern, homely country-style designs to be brought to life. The striking surface effect evokes a natural feel and brings a certain je ne sais quoi.

An appealing alternative comes in the form of wood decors with synchronised pore effect, giving the fronts an extremely authentic wood look. Here, the pore texture matches the pattern of the grain, creating a seamless harmony between appearance and feel. The result is a natural look that impresses from every angle.

Light, Scandinavian and welcoming: Prato in sand oak relief pore effect. Photo: Schüller

Lacquer fronts also set textured accents and create a homely atmosphere in the kitchen. Matt velvet lacquer impresses with its silky smooth surface, which looks subtle or striking depending on the colour, while matt satin fronts with their fine surface texture create an exciting contrast. Satin lacquer with fine pore texture, as on the Finca front, enhances both the visual appeal and tactile experience. The high-quality look of the fronts is emphasised by the anti-fingerprint coating, which also conveys additional warmth and a velvety feel.

From satin lacquer with pore (left) to fine matt velvet lacquer (right) – lacquer fronts provide a special textured finish. Photos: Schüller

Quality brand Schüller remains true to its holistic planning approach with these two new fronts, both of which are now available. Together with the wide range of lacquer fronts and fronts with synchronised pore effect, they form an extensive portfolio for customised kitchen designs. Here, design, function and everyday practicality work hand in hand, as do materials, colours, appearance and texture. The result is high-quality kitchens that look stunning and feel truly special.

The brand

Schüller is an international quality brand – made in Germany. The brand offers comprehensive interior design solutions, with kitchens as the starting point. With a diverse range and a focus on high quality at excellent value for money, Schüller caters to the broad mid-market segment. The goal is to create kitchens that bring joy and make home life noticeably easier and more fulfilling.

The company

Schüller Möbelwerk GmbH is a leading international kitchen furniture manufacturer. Founded in 1966, this family-run business produces around 170,000 bespoke kitchens every year. Schüller has stayed true to its production site in Germany since the beginning. It boasts exceptionally high vertical integration, great flexibility and efficient processes. Through the quality brand Schüller, the company designs kitchens for life for the broad mid-market segment, while next125 stands for timelessly elegant design in the premium range. Systemo complements the portfolio with top-quality worktops. The approximately 2,300 employees of Schüller Möbelwerk GmbH embody reliability, quality and close collaboration, upholding these values across around 40 countries worldwide. Markus Schüller, Max Heller and Manfred Niederauer have been running the family business, now in its second generation, since 2003.

Media Contacts

Schüller Möbelwerk GmbH
Annette Schumacher
Head of Marketing
Tel: +49 (0) 9825 83-3450
annette.schumacher@schueller.de